The pages that follow are your own test with marks added. Each question has a green tick or a red cross in the margin. Your own answer is already on the page. Where an answer is wrong, the correct answer is written in green next to it. In the reading section, a note in teal points to where the answer is in the text.

> Focus for next class: prepositions. Three of seven were correct, so review look for, wait for, in July and on 2nd March as fixed pairs. The reading section was perfect this time.

¿Y en un examen oficial?

Erika, con un 78% aprobarías un examen oficial de este nivel, como el Cambridge A2 Key, donde el aprobado está alrededor del 60%. Tu resultado está claramente por encima de esa línea, así que sería un buen aprobado. La lectura te salió perfecta: 4 de 4. Ten en cuenta que un examen oficial es cronometrado: tendrías unos 60 minutos para la parte escrita (lectura, gramática y vocabulario) y unos 30 minutos para el listening. Por eso conviene practicar con reloj.

THE MOMENT I WAKE UP...

Getting up in the morning is hard, but for many people, music seems to help them start the day. There is actually a list of perfect 'wake-up songs' compiled by a psychologist, David M. Greenberg, using data from the music download website, Spotify.

When choosing the perfect 'wake-up songs', Greenberg considered things like how the music builds up, positive lyrics and strong rhythm. He says that the music needs to start gently, and then slowly build up to help people to wake up. It must have positive lyrics to change people's mood from bad to good. The rhythm also needs to be strong, with a lot of bass and drums.

Greenberg's top choice of song is Viva La Vida, by Coldplay, which has all the three necessary elements. 'Science shows that music affects us in all kinds of ways, including emotionally, physiologically, and in the brain,' he says. 'The right music – like Viva La Vida, with its positive energy and strong momentum – can help you wake up and feel energetic for the rest of your day.'

What's your favourite 'wake-up song'? Leave your comments below.

Comments:

S Mine is definitely Say a Little Prayer by Aretha Franklin. I always play it first thing in the morning. Sandy

M I like getting up to a song by Imagine Dragons, called On Top of the World. I think it fits Dr Greenberg's criteria because it's really positive! Martha

M I hate listening to music when I wake up. I prefer listening to the early morning news. Then I can start the day knowing what's happening in the world. Martin
